District Editor-in-Chief Job Description

District was founded in 1995 as a one-page section in the SCAD-owned community newspaper, The Georgia Guardian. From there, the publication evolved into a stand-alone, editorially independent print publication. Today, District is the hub of an array of daily multimedia websites. A staff of approximately 20 paid student editors and another 75 volunteers contribute to District and its affiliated publications. The editor-in-chief makes daily content decisions, oversees training and recruitment and coordinates with the director of student media to make long-term decisions about the future of the publications. District's editor-in-chief earns a monthly stipend during fall, winter and spring quarters.
