Digital Media Blog Assistant Editor

Join SCAD student media as it launches a new web-based media platform dedicated to the school of digital media. The new website will launch in Spring 2019 and will be student media's sixth student-led media outlet, joining District, SCAD Radio, The Manor, Port City Review and the HoneyDripper.

SCAD student media seeks an assistant editor to play a leading role in the development, launch and maintenance of a new web-based media platform dedicated to the school of digital media. The ideal candidate for assistant editor will have solid knowledge and interest in the subjects comprising SCAD's school of digital media: Animation, game design, motion media and visual effects.

The assistant editor will write and edit content for the site while also producing digital content, including videos and podcasts relating to the subject matter. The assistant will work under the supervision of the blog's student editor. The assistant editor will work up to three hours per week in the student media center.

Though the site will be an official SCAD student publication, the voice should be entirely student-focused. The editors will have great discretion in determining the content, editorial voice and content mix for the site. The ideal candidate should be highly organized, motivated and able to work well under deadlines and pressure from fellow students, the adviser and faculty collaborators.

The ideal candidate should have the following skills:

- Proficient writers with good command of English grammar and punctuation.
- Solid knowledge and interest in the subjects comprising SCAD's school of digital media: Animation, game design, motion media and visual effects.
- Ability to learn video and audio editing for web posts.
- Social media marketing skills or willingness to learn these skills.
- Assist the editor-in-chief in building a website that students will find engaging and interesting.

The student editors will gain valuable skills in writing, editing, social media and multimedia content curation. This experience will be ideal for students seeking professional roles in media, professional writing or marketing.

The position offers a stipend of up to $1,500 per academic year, paid monthly during the fall, winter and spring quarters. Student editors are not considered SCAD employees. International students are welcome to apply. All applicants must be students enrolled full-time at the Savannah campus.

To apply, submit a cover letter explaining why you will be a successful editor and your vision for such a publication along with your resume to Adam Crisp, director of student media, at acrisp@scad.edu. The deadline to apply is 5 p.m. Friday, March 1, 2019.
